The city also wants its dealerships to follow guidelines from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices. The city also is asking that the dealerships be required to pay daily fines of $100 for any violations. Council members, who were meeting in a closed session Tuesday evening, had a vote scheduled for Nov. 14 on passing the resolution. The council members agreed to the settlement of $6.85 million over 65 claims by drivers in urban traffic congestion zones. The city agreed to pay to the people, and all those people had to agree to the agreement, so it did not go through the court system. The city also agreed to pay the attorneys' fees from the separate lawsuit brought by the drivers. The state Supreme Court has set a trial for Oct. 2 to decide if the state's automatic seat belt law is constitutional or not. The decision by the Florida Supreme Court last year struck down the law. The city paid $2.7 million on the claims before it was ordered to pay. The attorneys' fees for the case are about $300,000. The city also agreed to pay the attorneys $2 million in court costs. The city has paid about $5 million already. The city of Titusville has estimated the cost of complying with the law for the state could be as high as $17 million. That's a very thin city. Titusville got in trouble for not providing the same to their own employees. Since 2006, the city has admitted to not paying any parking tickets for their employees. 1cdb36666d
